Previous PostBest Homeowner Pressure Washer (Complete Reviews with Comparisons)Next PostCan You Use A 100ft Hose on A Pressure Washer? You can use a pressure washer to clean nearly anything outside in a fraction of the time it would take you otherwise. However, before you start dreaming about your next cleaning project, learn more about how to choose a unit, what you need and how to use a pressure washer.Types of Pressure WashersWhen you're shopping for pressure washers, you'll find two basic types: electric and gas. Electric pressure washers, which you power by plugging them into an outlet. That can limit where you use the pressure washer. Additionally, while they can be powerful, electric pressure washers are typically best for cleaning smaller items, including grills, patios and bicycles. People often like these types of pressure washers because they're quiet, lightweight, portable and low maintenance.Gas pressure washers require that you buy gas or oil to power the machine. However, that also gives you the freedom to go just about anywhere with it. Although gas pressure washers are heavier than electric ones, they usually have wheels to help you maneuver them. Additionally, they require regular maintenance, but they're more powerful and last longer than electric models.How Pressure Washers WorkNo matter whether you choose an electric or a gas-powered pressure washer, the machine works pretty much the same way. The motor or engine operates a pump. That pump pressurizes water from the hose up to 1,000 pounds or more before forcing it through the spray wand. The higher the pressure the washer puts out, the stronger its cleaning power. The pressure is measured in pounds per square inch (psi). While many of the smaller washers come with one adjustable nozzle that lets you switch from a single stream to a fan-shaped spray. Larger units may come with different nozzles, including some that rotate, create wider or narrower patterns and turbo-charge the stream.What Not to Pressure WashPressure washers are effective in removing flaking paint, stuck-on grime, mold, algae, mud and more. Using a pressure washer on surfaces like patios, decks, driveways, masonry, siding and brick is perfectly safe. However, some materials can't hold up to the powerful pressure. Examples include: Asphalt roofs: Using a pressure washer on your asphalt roof destroys it by removing the granules Antique items: Very old furnishings, old decking and antique buildings could all have dry rot or soft spots that your pressure washer will likely damage Stained wood: Pressure washing stained wood surfaces will remove the stain from the wood, requiring you to re-stain it after it dries Tips for Pressure WashingGetting started is a matter of powering up the machine and hooking it up to your garden hose and tightening all the connections to prevent air from getting into the lines. Tips for using your pressure washer include: Wash vertical surfaces like siding from the bottom up, then rinse from the top down Use the lowest pressure nozzle with the broadest spray pattern to avoid damaging the surface you're cleaning Avoid spraying into outlets, vents or air conditioning units Pressure Washer TroubleshootingAlways keep your pressure washer repair manual after buying one. Not only will it offer helpful tips for operating it safely, but it also will give you information like the model number, which you might need to get pressure washer repair parts. It also helps to keep pressure washer spare parts around for small fixes. For example, if you're having trouble starting it, you might need to replace the spark plug or clear out the fuel tank to remove debris before refueling.In many instances, you might not need parts. Instead, you might need to check things out. For example, if your pressure washer is leaking, check the O-rings and water seals, but it might be as simple as loose fittings, which are the most common cause of leaks. If you're having pressure problems, make sure your garden hose is the right size and is free of any kinks or leaks. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Pressure washers are a great tool for removing graffiti, dirt, and other stuck-on debris from surfaces, but there are some items that can get damaged by the powerful stream of water. While there are obvious items to avoid pressure washing, like people, animals, and plants, many other surfaces and objects around the home also are vulnerable to damage. The pressure of the water can be the reason behind avoiding certain objects, but some devices can be ruined by any water seeping into cracks. It can wreak havoc with sensitive electronic and mechanical systems. So, before pressure washing the car or the house, check this list of 9 things you should never clean with a pressure washer. istockphoto.com Giving the windows a quick wash with the pressure washer may seem like a great idea, especially when you consider how difficult it can be to reach windows on the second floor, but the fragile panes of glass can't hold up to the high-pressure spray produced by the pressure washer. The stream of water is more likely to blow out the glass than clean the window, leaving you with at least one window to replace and a big mess of water and glass to clean up inside. Related: How to Make Streak-Free Homemade Window Cleaner istockphoto.com Electric meters typically have a solid metal casing and transparent glass or plastic cover over the face of the meter. While the casing keeps the meter safe from rain, sleet, and snow, it can be vulnerable to the high-pressure stream produced by a pressure washer. The power produced by the pressure washer can force water through the narrow cracks and crevices, causing damage to the incoming electrical system and resulting in costly repairs. istockphoto.com Avoid turning the pressure washer on a roof with asphalt shingles to prevent damaging the roof and potentially causing leaks. The high water pressure actually removes the granules from the asphalt shingles and it can break or completely remove shingles if the roof is older. Leaks in the roof cause problems throughout the house, including rot, structural damage, and mold, which can be introduced into the heating and cooling system, affecting the health of anyone living in the home. istockphoto.com Cleaning out the gutters is not fun for most people, and it may be tempting to use the power of a pressure washer to remove built-up dirt, grime, and clumps or leaves. However, this isn't a good idea. A pressure washer is too powerful and could pull the gutter off the house or cause damage to the downspout. It's better to clean the debris out of the gutters by hand, then use a garden hose to rinse the inside of the gutter. Related: The Best Electric Pressure Washers for Your Outdoor Cleaning Projects istockphoto.com Pressure washers are ideal for cleaning concrete patios and paving stones. They also can be used at a lower pressure setting on new bricks. When the brick and mortar on the outside of the home is chipped and crumbling, then a pressure washer will only cause problems. The powerful stream of water can pull mortar out of the wall and cut into old brick, resulting in significant structural damage and exposing the interior of a home to outdoor weather conditions. istockphoto.com Some pressure washers are marketed as suitable for vehicles, and this can be true if the washer is set to a low-pressure setting. However, it's advised to completely avoid using a pressure washer on a vehicle because slight changes in distance from the vehicle or the angle of the spray can cause lasting damage, like dents and chips in the paint that leave the vehicle vulnerable to rusting. The power of the spray also can force water into the cracks and crevices on the vehicle's engine, leading to expensive repairs. istockphoto.com The powerful stream of water produced by a pressure washer is great for stripping paint from metal siding or stain from a wood deck. In fact, it's advised to pressure wash a deck before applying a new coat of stain to properly prepare the surface. If you don't want to chip, peel, or otherwise damage the stain or paint, then avoid using a pressure washer on stained or painted surfaces. Related: How to Clean a Deck istockphoto.com Outdoor light fixtures, like lamppost lights and porch lights, are made to resist rain, sleet, snow, ice, and high winds, but they aren't designed to deal with the powerful horizontal stream of water that comes out of a pressure washer. The high-pressure flow of water can break any glass panes or bulbs and may completely remove the light fixture from its mount. If the force doesn't destroy the fixture, the water may still seep in through the cracks and damage the internal electrical components. istockphoto.com The metal box that houses an air conditioner helps to protect delicate metal fins that filter the air as it enters the air conditioning unit. While a pressure washer would quickly remove dirt and debris from the outside of the air conditioner, it also can bend or crush the fins, restricting airflow into the unit. Instead, use a garden hose or vacuum and a soft brush to gently clean between the fins and save the pressure washer for the driveway. istockphoto.com Summer is the perfect time to break out the pressure washer. Take matters into your own hands by steering clear of all these items around your house while pressure washing in the hot months. bobvila.com Whether you're a lawn care novice or a master gardener, everyone can use a little help around the yard.
